GRIM OUTLOOK AT STALINGRAD

TREMENDOUS AXIS PRESSURE

IN view of the autumn rains, which are already softening the sandy steppes outside Stalingrad, Marshal von Bock is driving his panzer forces forward at a still more furious pace, and the Red Army, fighting back doggedly, was last night confronting the most concentrated German effort witnessed on the Eastern front.

Under pressure of constant attacks, they have abandoned five strong points—officially described as "inhabited localities"—in the past forty-eight hours.

Berlin claims that the fortifications have been breached and the Volga reached south of the town, though the Moscow official report indicates no yielding of ground at these crucial south-western approaches.

At Mozdok the Russian success in pinning the Germans down for nearly three weeks is overshadowed by the fateful Volga battle, but there is little doubt that the German drive for the Grozny oilfields is now in difficulty.

BELFAST M.P.'S QUESTIONS

WHEN questions were asked in the House of Commons yesterday regarding what was described as attacks by gunmen crossing the border into Northern Ireland, Professor Savory (C., Belfast University) pressed for a protest to be made to the Government of Eire.

NO PROTEST MADE

Professor Savory asked whether attention had been called to the fact that on 2nd September, at 2.15 p.m., a lorry, preceded by a motor car, each full of armed men, entered Northern Ireland from Eire at Culloville, County Armagh, and fired with Tommy guns and automatics on a sergeant and constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, wounding the sergeant; whether a protest had been made to Mr. de Valera against the use of Eire territory as a base for an armed raid on Northern Ireland, and whether a demand had been made for compensation for the wounded sergeant.

Mr. Emrys Evans, Parliamentary Secretary, replied:—We have not made representations in the matter to the Eire Government, who clearly have their own difficulties.

Professor Savory—How many more of these raids are to take place before any protest is made to the Government of Eire, who are responsible and, presumably, are masters in their own house?

There were cheers, and cries of "answer," but no further reply was given.

MILITARY DUTY

Professor Savory put a question in almost similar terms to the Secretary of State for War, and asked whether he is satisfied that adequate steps have been taken by the military authorities for the protection of Northern Ireland against any further armed incursion from Eire.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, Parliamentary Under Secretary, who replied, said that the maintenance of public order in Northern Ireland, on the border or elsewhere, was, first of all, a matter for the civil authorities. It was, however, a military responsibility to go to the aid of the civil power if necessary, and Professor Savory could rest assured that the military authorities had taken such steps as were proper to provide such assistance if called upon to do so.

Professor Savory — Can Mr. Henderson inform the House how these Tommy guns, Thompson machine-guns and automatics, reported to be of British manufacture, were found in the hands of these invaders from Eire?

Mr. Henderson—I have no information on the matter.

"WELL IN HAND"

Professor Savory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is aware that at 4 a.m. on Friday, 4th September, the police barracks of the Royal Ulster Constabulary at Beleck, Co. Fermanagh, on the border of Eire, was attacked by rifle fire and bombs, and that at 11.15 p.m. on Saturday, 5th September, a police patrol of the Royal Ulster Constabulary was ambushed at Clady, Co. Tyrone, 300 yards from the border of Eire; that two constables were mortally wounded and another seriously injured, and what steps he proposes to take for the defence of the frontier of Northern Ireland against these attacks.

Mr. Peake, Parliamentary Under Secretary, Home Office—The maintenance of public order in Northern Ireland near the border, as elsewhere, is a matter primarily for the civil authorities, and I understand the Government of Northern Ireland are satisfied that the situation is well in hand.

Professor Savory—May I ask him to express on behalf of His Majesty's Government sympathy with the widows and children of these constables, noble Ulstermen, all foully done to death by cowardly assassins, who flee over the border as soon as they have committed their dastardly deed.

There was no reply.

Five persons were killed and others were injured when a German raider, flying at a considerable height, dropped a stick of bombs on an English south coast town yesterday. Houses were wrecked and families rendered homeless. The raider was driven off by anti-aircraft fire.

NOVOROSSISK ABANDONED

Last night's Soviet communiqué states:—"During September 11 our troops fought the enemy in the areas west and south-west of Stalingrad, as well as in the area of Mozdok and on the Volkhov front.

"After fierce fighting, lasting several days, our troops have evacuated Novorossisk."

TENSE SITUATION

Marshal Von Bock, throwing in a mass of new German and Italian troops, is pressing nearer to Stalingrad, said Reuter, in a telegram from Moscow last night. About 1,000 planes and hundreds of tanks are pounding at one sector of the front, widening the wedges driven into the defences. Marshal Timoshenko's men are performing miracles of endurance, but no human being can be expected to survive the shattering concentration of metal which the Germans are using as a battering-ram. West of the city the Russians have been forced to abandon three more villages, bringing the total to five in the last 48 hours. The situation, says Red Star, is "exceedingly tense." The Germans are launching one attack after another, bringing up fresh reserves and sending them into the front lines without pause, striving to wear down the defence by sheer weight of numbers. Luftwaffe squadrons are hammering at one point after another in quick succession, ploughing up every yard of the front with a deadly thoroughness.

CALL FROM MOSCOW

Moscow yesterday issued a call to the Red Army to hold Stalingrad, "The Red Verdun," at all costs. The amount of men and equipment, particularly aircraft, which Marshal Von Bock has flung against the city exceeds anything so far attempted on the whole Russian front; yet, the defenders are still confident that they can hold the Volga fortress.

Pravda, official organ of the Communist Party, writes:—"Winter is drawing near. The Germans are in a hurry. They have only a few months in which to achieve the aims of their offensive, but however much they hurry they will never attain these aims. But to-day we must face the fact that the absence of a second front in Europe enables the enemy to hurl practically the whole of his forces against the Red Army—that we are bearing the blows of Hitler's army single-handed."

DIFFICULT ROAD

Beyond Novorossisk runs a very narrow 200-mile strip of foreshore leading into the malaria-ridden swampy Rion Valley. From there the only eastbound road inside Transcaucasia follows between two ranges over the Suram mountain pass, which will be no less difficult to overcome than the Terek Valley, 300 odd miles to the east, in which the Germans have been held for weeks. This is at present the most encouraging sector of the whole southern front.

After making rapid progress down the Rostov-Baku railway to Mozdok, the Germans have been marking time there for over a fortnight. Their threat to the Grozny oilfields has been held by Cossack forces concentrated in the Caucasus foothills. At Voronezh a German and Hungarian attempt to cut off the Soviet wedge south of the town has been beaten off. The Germans used 250 planes and laid down an intense artillery barrage, including some of their 12 and 24-barrel mortars. Russian artillery replied with a screen of fire twice as heavy, blasting the Axis positions from the front, while Soviet units attacked in the rear. The Germans were thrown back to their starting point, losing three battalions of infantry, ten tanks, six mortar batteries and a number of lorries.

SOVIET ADVANCE

Soviet units on the central front, where General Zhukov's troops have been wedged into the outskirts of Rzhev for a fortnight, are advancing and occupying new positions, said Moscow Radio last night. On Thursday one unit continued to attack in the outskirts of a large inhabited locality—not specified by name—improved their positions, and dislodged the Germans from their fortifications. More than 700 Germans were killed.

Twenty-five blockhouses and nine dugouts were destroyed, four mortar and three artillery batteries were silenced. Another unit dislodged the Germans from two inhabited localities and continued their advance, successfully repelling two counter-attacks.—(Reuter.)

SIEGE WARFARE

Berlin reports fierce Soviet counter-attacks, particularly against the wedges driven north and south of Stalingrad. The German News Agency says the Russians are "attempting to slacken the German pressure," and adds that, "in the fight for the Stalingrad fortress, which demands the use of special forces, it cannot be expected that ground will be gained daily. The fight for Stalingrad is siege-warfare in the true sense of the word.

"The German pincer round the Volga bend holds fast. The German Command does not need to accelerate the tempo of the attack. It would seem as if the Soviets are slackening the weight of their blows on other fronts to concentrate on the defence of Stalingrad."

ELECTRICITY AS YOU WERE, BUT NO MORE

AS anticipated in the Irish Times on Thursday, the E.S.B.'s restrictions on electricity consumption have been relaxed temporarily.

From yesterday, and until further notice, consumption will be restricted to the average daily consumption in the corresponding period of 1941—without regard to the purpose for which the electricity is used.

In a statement the E.S.B. said yesterday:—"By reason of the flood conditions obtaining on the River Shannon, the Electricity Supply Board has decided to relax, as from this date, and as a temporary measure, the restrictions on consumption of electricity imposed by the Order dated 12th May, 1942.

Until further notice consumption will be restricted to the average daily consumption in the corresponding period of the previous year, without regard to the purpose for which electricity is used.

"This alteration is to be understood to be of a temporary nature, and is intended solely to permit of the use of electricity made available as a result of the recent unusually heavy rainfall.

"As the normal winter load will exceed the maximum output of the Shannon station, and as, in addition, the shortage of coal and other fuels will considerably increase the demand for electricity, the Board desires to inform consumers that it will be necessary to limit electricity consumption in the coming months, and regulations to secure this end will be issued in due course.

"The Board wishes to express its appreciation of the manner in which the consumers are co-operating with it to secure the necessary reduction in consumption."

HE WANTS TO BE A LION-TAMER

Dublin's most spectacular animal act has been staged these last few Sundays by an eight-year-old amateur, Ken Ryan, of Stillorgan, and a nine months old lioness, who do a playful catch-as-catch-can exhibition on the lawn of the Zoological

Gardens. They roll each other over on the grass in a way which suggests that lion-taming is a much overrated profession until someone else goes to try it, and then the lioness's playful mood gives place to an angry snarl.

Ken's lion-taming experience goes back about three months, when he and a number of other children were introduced to Flame. At her meeting with this group of children, Flame walked over to Master Ryan and nuzzled him. A few days later they had established such confidence in each other that they were able to start romping in the grass. Ever since Flame has always been able to pick Ken out of any group however large. Even after a six weeks' holiday the young lioness greeted him affectionately on his return.

According to Mr. C. Flood, Zoo Superintendent, young Ryan has an extraordinary way with animals, and never shows the least sign of fear. Mr. Flood himself took several days to establish friendly terms with Flame.

Interviewed at his Stillorgan home last night, Master Ryan said he had not been at all afraid of the lioness, though his previous animal experience had been confined to the care of 40 tame rabbits. His other great personal friends in the Zoo include Stephanie, another lioness, and Sarah, the elephant. He has never tried rolling in the grass with either of these. When he grows up he would like to be—you've probably guessed it—a lion tamer.

"WE WANT INDIA TO BE FREE"

MR. AMERY'S HOPE

"WE want India to be free," declared Mr. L. S. Amery, Secretary for India, replying to a debate in the House of Commons yesterday. The Government, he added, welcomed any practical proposal which, within the broad general framework of their considered policy, was possible.

"Very soon after the Lord Privy Seal left India," said Mr. Amery, "it became clear that, under Mr. Gandhi's inspiration, Congress was steadily swinging towards a policy of direct defiance, aimed at paralysis of the existing Government of India. The Government of India showed remarkable patience, and eventually, on its own initiative, without reference to Britain, took the only action a self-respecting Government could take in the circumstances. The Government, instead of waiting to be hit, hit first, and, by doing so, preserved India from grave disaster. The vigorous action taken by the Government of India and the self-governing provinces prevented a situation which would have paralysed the Indian war effort, and made it impossible to defend India or relieve China by the re-occupation of Burma.

"We have emerged from a situation of grave danger into one on which we can look with a reasonable measure of confidence," he went on. "At the same time, disturbances are by no means wholly over, and we should do well not to suggest that we are out of the wood yet."

"The British Government, in all fairness, claim that all the constructive proposals in recent years have come from here, and action on the part of Mr. Gandhi, who in this matter has been the arch-saboteur, has been wrecking and deliberately coercive."

BRITAIN'S DESIRE

They had to wait, he said, for a change of heart in the Congress leaders. There was nothing to prevent men of goodwill in India from coming together and hastening on the future by seeing if some agreement could be found on the nature of the future constitution and on the method by which it was to be arrived at. While the situation was immensely complicated and difficult, there were elements of unity and a common wish among all Indians and a common agreement that they wanted to see India self-governing and free and united and not reverting to anarchy.

"We want India to take her place as a freely associated member in the partnership of the Commonwealth which is destined to play an even greater part in the world in future years than it has played in the past. That is the policy to which we are committed, and to which the Prime Minister committed himself yesterday—a policy which all patriotic Indians equally believe in. With that substratum of unity, I think it is not beyond reason to hope that under some constitutional form or other—I hope at not too distant a time—Indians may be able to agree to a constitution under which they can not only attain political freedom, but develop to the full the wonderful resources of India and the great gifts of her people."

Mr. James Maxton (I.L.P.) begged the Government not to make the same mistake as they did over Ireland. "Do not wait," he said, "until you have to concede to force what you could easily have granted out of decency and out of principles for which you are fighting the war."

YEAR'S HARVEST PROSPECTS

NO LACK OF BREAD

EIRE will have no need to worry about its bread and flour supplies during the next 12 months. There will be no shortage and no rationing as there were during last winter, but the cost will be greater.

There will be no room for waste, since it is doubtful, in the absence of official figures, whether home production will be equal to the total annual requirements of the country—370,000 tons of dried wheat. The crop last year yielded, roughly, 280,000 tons, representing the product of nearly 500,000 acres; but this season Irish farmers sowed 121,400 acres of wheat more than they did in 1941. On acreage figures, therefore, home wheat should be at least equal to normal demands.

The yield, however, will be the deciding factor, and while official sources, remembering the serious results of over-estimation last fall, hesitate to venture an opinion on the probable amount of wheat available there is no doubt that the corn this season is heavy, and that if imports be necessary they will be comparatively light. It is not likely that official wheat figures will be ready for another six weeks.

LABOUR FACTOR

Apart from increased prices to the farmers for wheat and the subsidisation of bread and flour, food costs are likely to be adversely affected by the more than usually high proportion of labour demanded by this year's harvest, owing, mainly, to the stormy weather of August, and also to some extent to the unsuitability of some of the workers available.

Over a considerable area, corn, well developed in spite of a late spring, and subsequent growing difficulties, has been lodged by wind and rain, and in many instances it has been necessary to get back to the methods of a quarter of a century past—working with a small horse reaper, or reaping and sheaving by hand—in order to save the crop. Much of this work has to be done by men who have had no experience of it; or, at least, have not performed it for a generation or more.

SAVING THE CROPS

The flax crop in some places has suffered from lack of experience in saving it.

Inquiries by an Irish Times reporter in agricultural circles left the impression that the majority of producers have found that the corn filled better than last year, and that the yield per acre will be materially better. At the moment the task of getting the cereals in from the fields is occupying the complete attention of growers, and while it is likely that co-operative threshing may be more widespread than usual, farmers are forced, by the weather risks, to carry out preliminary harvesting with their own labour.

THE SOUTH AT PEACE

TRIBUTE TO L.D.F.

SOUTH OF IRELAND, Friday.

A peace which has no definite breaking point has at last come to the South. The third phase of the manœuvres ended in such a disposition of the opposing forces that only a real battle could have decided to whom would go the victory. The force which had been more or less hemmed in on a piece of coast had made tremendous efforts to enlarge their hold on the territory, and when the "Cease Fire" was sent abroad there was no way of telling what would be the end of the affair. The way in which the men had stood up to the very strenuous fortnight is a valuable lesson to the whole community, and I for one know that in this Army of ours we have something on which we can rely.

The manœuvres brought life to a large area in which quietness is the salient feature, and the interest taken in them has been immense. There were some who got fun out of it, like the voluntary "Fifth Columnist," who informed two opposing units of their respective positions, and then put his bicycle in a safe place and sat on the ditch watching the fun. Not everybody has taken the same light view of the matter, and one of the features of the third exercise has been the keenness of the Local Defence Force. Last night they had to contend with a small force of paratroops, and acquitted themselves with honour. The dropping of the paratroops was watched by a large crowd, the level rays of the setting sun making the white umbrellas of the descending "raiders" gleam against a clear evening sky.

Mr. de Valera and Mr. Oscar Traynor, Minister for Defence, were watchers. Mr. de Valera has often said that, if called upon, the defence forces would acquit themselves as well as any military force in the world, and his tour of the recent exercises can only have strengthened this view.

BRITISH PROGRESS IN MADAGASCAR

RAPID MOVE TOWARDS THE CAPITAL

BRITISH troops, moving inland from Majunga, the port already occupied on the west coast of Madagascar, were reported last night to be making rapid progress towards Antananarivo, the island capital.

A Vichy report indicates that after some fighting a few miles east of Mevatanana the British forced their way over the Betsiboka River, which, from this point, flows almost due south to the capital.

Majungal Morondava, another port 340 miles further south, and the island of Nossi Be, in the north, were seized with little opposition and light casualties.

Other troops are moving south from the British-held base at Diego Suarez towards the port of Ambanja, 120 miles away.

A Vichy report says that another British naval force has been sighted off Tulear, 230 miles south of Morondava.

M. Laval night told a Press Conference that America must share equal responsibility with the British for the attack.—(Press Association and Reuter.)

A communiqué from General Officer Commanding-in-Chief, East Africa, states:—

"Early on Thursday morning our troops effected widespread landings on the west coast of Madagascar, including the Island of Nossi Be, in the north, and the ports of Majunga and Morondava, further to the south. Nossi Be was quickly in our possession, after only slight opposition. At Majunga opposition, which again was only slight, was soon overcome, and the civil and military authorities arranged the surrender of the town. The landing at Morondava, in the south, encountered no resistance and our troops continued their advance inland towards Mahaho, on the road to Ambositra. While these landings were taking place other columns of our troops moved southwards from the occupied area of Diego Suarez. The last reports received yesterday showed that they were making steady progress towards Ambanja, on the west coast."

NAIROBI, Friday.—British troops who landed at dawn yesterday at Majunga were reported to-night to be advancing on Antananarivo, the capital, over 200 miles to the south-east. Another column is said to be pushing towards Antisirane, some 80 miles to the south-west.—(Reuter.)

Royal Marines, who played an important part in the original operations in Madagascar four months ago, are again engaged in the present operations, it was learned in London last night. Since Diego Suarez was occupied, coastal patrols have been in operation to protect British shipping to the Middle East, and it is probable that this watch will now be extended. There are a number of small, but fairly good harbours around the coast, which can be used by Japanese submarines or raiders, the island being well within their range.—(Press Association.)

VICHY, Friday.—British troops, advancing on Antananarivo, were nearing Mevatanana, 80 miles from Majunga, at nightfall last night, according to latest reports in Vichy to-night. Mevatanana is about 160 miles from Antananarivo. Fighting was said to be in progress this morning on the Betsiboka, a few miles east of Mevatanana. Warships were sighted this morning off Tulear, a west coast port, 230 miles south of Morondova, the reports add.

Latest Vichy reports from Madagascar say that British troops today crossed the Betsiboka River, east of Mevatanana.—(Reuter.)

VICHY, Friday.—The Governor-General of Madagascar to-day published a proclamation denying that any help had been given to the Japanese by the island's Administration. The proclamation declared that "no control whatever is exercised by any other Power over the Administration, and that foreign submarines have never received, or even asked for, help or shelter in our ports. There had been at no time any kind of demand for help on the part of Japanese submarines nor any flying over our territory by Japanese aircraft."

LAVAL'S REGRET

VICHY, Friday. — Marshal Pétain and the French Cabinet this morning discussed the fresh British action and the consequences of "this act of aggression."

M. Laval told Press men to-night that French forces in Madagascar are "very inadequate." "I regret it," he added. "The encouragement given by the United States to Great Britain makes American responsibility for the attack equal to the British. The proclamation issued by the Governor-General of Madagascar," he added, "is an exact reply to British allegations, and sufficient for the time being."

The German News Agency says that M. Laval, when asked whether France would make any démarche concerning the attack, replied "Yes." He observed that both Washington and London promised that Madagascar would be returned later to France—though, unfortunately, they had forgotten to supply the date.—(Reuter.)

NO U.S. TROOPS

WASHINGTON, Friday. — Mr. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, said to-day that he had not yet been informed whether United States troops would be needed to assist in the British action, or whether the British Government had asked for such help.—(Reuter.)

DUSSELDORF RAID

31 BOMBERS MISSING

Dusseldorf was the principal target of Thursday night's British bomber raid.

"A powerful force of our bombers made a heavy attack on the industrial town and other objectives in Western Germany," says the Air Ministry communiqué. "The Fighter Command aircraft carried out offensive patrols over enemy-occupied territory, in the course of which one enemy aircraft was destroyed.

"Thirty-one of our bombers are missing.

"The attack on Dusseldorf was the heaviest raid that Bomber Command has yet made on a moonless night. Numbers of flares, and then the fires which sprang up from over one hundred thousand incendiary bombs did the work of the moon," states the Air Ministry News Service.

"Flares and fires made landmarks conspicuous, and before long Dusseldorf was a furnace. . . . All indications are that the moonless raid will have done damage on a vast scale."

According to the Press Association Air Correspondent, the powerful force employed indicates that the raid was on a considerably higher scale than any recent one. Dusseldorf itself has a population of about 350,000 and another 150,000 people live on its outskirts. It is one of the largest centres of Germany's heavy industry, its products including parts for motor-vehicles, aircraft, warships, torpedoes, mines, heavy guns, shells, bombs, grenades, armour plates and explosives.

Thursday's attack was the sixth heavy Royal Air Force raid in ten nights.

DEARER BREAD AND BUTTER

FINE GAEL COMMENT

At a special meeting of the Fine Gael North-East Dublin Constituency Executive, held at 3 Merrion square, the action of the Government in imposing the increased cost of bread and butter on the retail purchaser was condemned as laying on far the greater part of the burden of this cost on persons with large families, who were generally the poorest of the community. It was particularly inequitable to do so in view of the stringency of the stand-still Order regarding wages.

It was decided to call upon the Fine Gael Party in the Dail to see that the costs of these increases and all future increases brought about by the emergency, in the costs of the principal necessaries of life, are borne by subsidy.

BUTTER VOUCHERS

The rationing of butter in the Dublin and Bray areas does not apply to holders of food vouchers, who are entitled to receive the appropriate quantity of butter, in addition to the prescribed ration. Food voucher holders also are entitled, as heretofore, to present their vouchers for butter to any retailer in the area offering creamery butter for sale, and whether or not registered for the purpose of the rationing scheme, with the retailer, the shopkeeper is obliged to accept the vouchers.

CLASH WITH AXIS

PATROL ACTIVITY IN EGYPT

A brisk clash in the northern sector of the El Alamein front occurred when Axis troops tried to intercept a British night patrol, says Reuter. The patrol replied with machine-gun and mortar fire. In the southern sector the Eighth Army's artillery pounded Marshal Rommel's tank forces throughout the night, said a Reuter message yesterday.

Torpedo-carrying aircraft, operating north of Derna on the night of Wednesday-Thursday, scored a direct hit on an Axis merchantman. When last seen, the vessel was blazing.—(Reuter.)

MURDER OF DETECTIVE

After three days of widespread search and investigation by the Civic Guards into the murder of Detective-Sergeant Denis O'Brien, who was shot while leaving his home at Ballyboden, Co. Dublin, by car on Wednesday morning, there have been no developments.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS IN DUBLIN

PUBLIC AWAIT ADVICE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The public are indebted to your journal for your warning about this dread disease. There is, however, a strange inconsistency in your rather loosely worded reports. You state in the issue of Thursday, September 10th—"Dr. J. A. Harbison, Medical Officer for Health for County Dublin, told a reporter yesterday . . . 'There have been a few cases (italics mine) of infantile paralysis in the last three months—eight, in fact, of which three have been fatal, and the fact that the majority of them have occurred near the sea has given rise to this yarn about the germ being washed in.'"

In your issue of next day—in almost direct contradiction of this authoritative statement, using vague generalities, "medical authorities," "a reporter was informed," "a medical specialist stated," you proceed—"A severe outbreak of infantile paralysis in Dublin, on the North side of the city particularly, is causing concern . . . the disease is spreading constantly in the last few days, and at least two cases daily are being notified . . . there have been a lot of deaths from it, and it is feared there will be further casualties."

Rumour, at any time, has a mischievous influence. The wording of your report is having a frightening effect upon people on the North side of the city, especially amongst the poor crowded together, as they are, in room dwellings. It is a grave responsibility to spread mere rumour, if it is only such, in times like the present, when public morale is in danger of being lowered so easily. Would it not be wiser to ask the City Health Authorities to tell the public the actual truth day by day, and warn them of any precautions that can be taken? It would be better to say nothing at all unless it is stated on the highest authority.—Yours, etc. E. H. F. CAMPBELL.

St. George's Rectory, Drumcondra, Dublin, Sept. 11th, 1942.

TRAINS CRASH AT SPEED

BERLIN, Friday.—Fourteen persons, mostly workmen, were killed and about 100 seriously injured in a railway accident at Herstal, near Liege, this morning, states a despatch to the German News Agency. Two branch-lines service trains collided at full speed and telescoped on the single-line track to Bassenge.—(Reuter.)

COWS IN SARAH CURRAN'S HOME

"SHE is far from the land where her young herp sleeps," and where her father's house has been turned into a cattle-byre. This addition would bring up to date Tom Moore's famous song about Sarah Curran and her sweetheart, Robert Emmet.

An Irish Times reporter went out to visit the house yesterday, as a result of reports that part of it had been demolished. He walked up the road from Rathfarnham to where the house stands on the first gentle slopes of the Dublin Mountains.

Even from a distance he could see that the house was a ruin. A two-storeyed building of the early 18th Century type, half of it is without a roof, and there is a big enough hole in the other half to bare the rafters. Window frames are empty and partially rotted, and the main entrance is without a door.

The garden into which, according to tradition, Emmet stole back after the collapse of his rebellion for his last interview with Sarah, is overgrown with nettles and briars. Here he came from his hiding place in the Wicklow Mountains and saw her just a few days before he was taken prisoner. It is this garden which has gone into dramatic literature, being the scene of one of the acts of Denis Johnston's great play, "The Old Lady Says 'No.'"

Inside the house, in the drawing-room, there were obvious signs of the cattle from the neighbouring fields having the right of way. Yet this was the drawingroom in which Curran probably discussed with his friend, Grattan, their plans to forward Catholic Emancipation, and where, alone, he had probably studied the briefs from which he defended the long succession of '98 men, from Rowan Hamilton to Napper Tandy. In the back part of the house, in a room which was probably once a pantry, our reporter found a cow stabled. There was only one sign of remembrance of things past to comfort anyone interested in Irish traditions. Our reporter, when he was looking for the house, met on the road two little barefooted boys of seven or eight years of age. "What is that house in the middle of the fields?" he said, pointing to the ruin. "Sarah Curran's house," they both replied, almost together.

SEARCH IN CLADY

FOUR MEN DETAINED

There was intense police activity in Clady and surrounding districts yesterday. Early in the morning a large force of Royal Ulster Constabulary and "B" Specials assembled in the village and began a systematic search of houses, drains, fields, etc. The force, under the command of District Inspector Patrick Hansley, Strabane, was busily engaged in the search for more than five hours. Four men were detained and taken to Strabane Police Barracks.

As a result of Thursday night's raid by police on a house in Crumlin road, Belfast, a small printing press, literature and arms were seized. The arms, it is stated, included a German Mauser pistol, three Webley revolvers, and an automatic pistol.

RATION BOOK TRAFFIC

COUPONS SOLD AT PROFIT

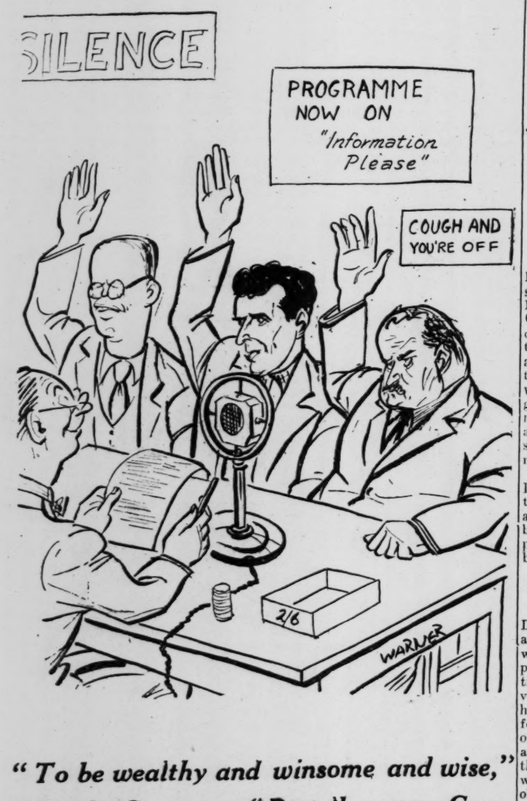
In order to put a stop to trafficking in coupons, summonses were heard against a number of people in Waterford for infringing the rationing regulations. James Larkin, window show card designer, Manor street, Waterford, described by Dr. D. R. Counahan, State Solicitor, as the principal defendant, was summoned for buying portions of ration books, removing pages from them, and being in possession of more than one ration book.

He pleaded guilty, and was fined £4 in respect of each of three summonses, a total of £12, Dr. Counahan stating that Larkin, who had 23 books in his possession, detached pages A, B and C from books and sold them for 5s. each, having previously paid 2s. 6d. each for them.

ULSTER UNION CLUB

REPLY TO POLICE

Mr. Denis Ireland, President of the Ulster Union Club, writing in connection with the statement published yesterday by Police Headquarters in Belfast concerning an arrest following a police raid on a house, points out "once more" that the club relies solely on constitutional means for the furtherance of its aim. "It is, therefore, impossible for a member of an illegal organisation to become a member without concealment of the fact of his illegal associations. Similarly, membership of an illegal organisation, or the illegal possession of arms, if proven, leads automatically to expulsion."



"To be wealthy and winsome and wise,"
Asks the Compere, "Do tell me, you Guys,
What rule should you keep?"

St. Martin Fancied For Red Cross 'Chase

NINE runners have been declared for the Red Cross 'Chase to be run at Baldoyle this afternoon, and class is well represented by Golden Jack, St. Martin and Crafty Prince. It is quite on the cards that these three, who figure at the top of the handicap, will fight out the finish. It is in favour of Crafty Prince that he has won five times over this course during the season. Golden Jack and St. Martin each won his last race, and both are at the top of their form. Among the lightly-weighted division, Radio Wave and Reveal make most appeal, but St. Martin, Golden Jack and Crafty Prince are suggested as likely to finish in the order named. Selections:—

Sutton Hurdle Lace—Barghora.
Mooresfort Plate—Edvina.
Howth Handicap—Vesington Call.
Red Cross 'Chase—St. Martin.
Stewards' Handicap—Scots Guard.
Kinsealy Flat Race—Aughamore,
Raheny 'Chase—Crafty Prince (if absent, Housewarmer).

BREEDERS AND OWNERS MEET

A meeting of the Council of the Bloodstock Breeders' and Horse-owners' Association of Ireland was held yesterday at the Shelbourne Hotel. The following members attended:—Mr. Isidore J. Blake (in the chair), Messrs. W. E. Wylie, K.C.; R. More O'Ferrall, Joseph McGrath, W. J. Mitchell, Frank Rogers, Major A. H. Watt, M.F.H.; Colonel A. J. Blake, Sir James Nelson, Bart.; Duke de Stacpoole, Captain Cyril Harty, Captain E. A. Gargan Messrs. George V. Malcolmson, T. W. Dreaper, P. Dunne Cullinan and F. P. Cannon (hon. secretary). Mr. George A. Harris was elected to fill the vacancy in the Hunter Section of the Council. Seventy-two new members were elected.

A very full discussion took place with regard to Mr. More O'Ferrall's memorandum, but no definite decision was arrived at, and it was referred back to the Executive Committee to draw up a scheme which, in their opinion, in view of what was expressed at the meeting, would be acceptable to the general members, such scheme to be placed before a future meeting of the Council, and, if approved by them, before a general meeting to be summoned for further consideration of the scheme.

Many questions connected with breeding and racing were discussed, and many valuable suggestions were put forward, which the Executive Committee undertook to investigate.

A vote of thanks was passed to Mr. George A. Harris for obtaining 68 new members for the Association, and the Executive Committee was asked to investigate the question of increasing the membership.

A vote of sympathy was passed with Mr. W. P. Ryan on the death of his son and with Mr. Ernest Bellaney on the death of his sister.

CHANGES IN DUBLIN G.A.A. SIDE

One change in defence and three positional alterations in attack strengthen Dublin's chance in the All-Ireland football final, writes Pat'O. The re-entrance of the Fingal defender, Bobby Beggs, inspires confidence. He has a wealth of "final" experience with Galway and Dublin, and is the ideal flanker to Pat Kennedy. Otherwise Dublin's defence and midfield remain intact. Four of the forward positions are reconstructed. Of the six that played against Cavan in the semi-final, only Joy and Pat O'Connor retain their posts. G. Fitzgerald and his club mate Bermingham, swop places, whilst T. Banks comes to the left corner, with Matt Fletcher, of Peader Mackens, coming back to his favourite post as right top corner.

This is a good Dublin side, that only needs dash and team work to shape well. Onyva (T. G. Fletcher) J. J. Power 7 13

HARD COURT TENNIS

The Elm Park autumn hard court tournament had been advanced so rapidly during the week that the only event in which the final had not been reached yesterday was the mixed doubles. The finalists, Egan and Mrs. Lister and Kemp and Miss Good, showed brilliant form in their semi-final matches. Results:—

Mixed Doubles Championship.—Second Round—F. W. Peard and Miss S. Hogan beat T. J. Lydon and Miss C. Egan—6-2, 6-0; C. A. Kemp and Miss B. Good beat D. D. O'Sullivan and Miss D. Miley—6-1, 7-5; R. F. Egan and Mrs. F. G. Lister beat D. C. Mahony and Miss M. Blayney—8-6, 6-3.

Semi-finals—Kemp and Miss Good beat Peard and Miss Hogan—6-0, 6-2; Egan and Mrs. Lister beat A. E. Fannin and Miss O. Poole—6-2, 6-2.

To-day's Programme.—Championship Finals—2.0: A. E. Fannin v. R. F. Egan; Miss Good v. Miss Nichols; followed by Misses Hogan and Mathews v. Misses Lombard and Poole; Fannin and Egan v. McWeeney and Peard; Egan and Mrs. Lister v. C. A. Kemp and Miss B. Good. Handicap finals commence at 2.30.

BRISK FIGHTS OFF DUTCH COAST

GERMAN TANKER SUNK

A BRITISH Admiralty communiqué last night gives particulars of an attack by British light coastal craft on a German convoy. A tanker was hit by a torpedo and "disintegrated," and in a series of actions later between the attackers and the convoy's covering forces it is claimed that serious damage was inflicted on six other boats. A British motor gunboat was lost. The communiqué states:—

"Early this morning a series of actions developed off the Dutch coast between our light coastal craft and an enemy convoy and its escorts and covering forces, consisting of E-boats, R-boats, armed trawlers and large flak-ships.

"As the result of these actions, one enemy tanker was destroyed, one large flak-ship was probably destroyed, and one armed trawler and, at least, six E- or R-boats were very severely damaged. We lost one motor gunboat and suffered a few casualties. The next-of-kin are being informed as soon as possible.

"This series of actions started when one of our offensive patrols, under the command of Lieut. P. G. C. Dickens, M.B.E., R.N., intercepted and attacked an enemy convoy off the Texel. In this attack an enemy tanker of medium size was seen to disintegrate after being hit by a torpedo. A large flak-ship, forming part of the escort, was also probably hit by torpedo.

"The attack on the convoy was followed by a brisk action at close range between our light coastal craft and the enemy escorts. In the course of this action an enemy armed trawler and one R-boat were hit and very severely damaged.

"Shortly afterwards a patrol of our light coastal craft, commanded by Lieutenant J. B. R. Herne, D.S.C., R.N., intercepted a force of four E-boats and severely handled one of them before they were able to escape. Later this patrol met two more E-boats, and again one of the enemy craft was severely damaged. It appears that these two groups of E-boats joined forces, and were reinforced, for a group of about eight E or R-boats was intercepted and engaged shortly afterwards by a patrol of our light coastal craft under the command of Lieutenant E. M. Thorpe, R.N.

"At least three more of the enemy vessels received serious damage in the subsequent engagement. It was during this action that one of our motor gunboats was set badly on fire. Since there was no chance of being able to save the boat, Lieutenant Thorpe ran his motor gunboat alongside the burning vessel, took off survivors and made sure that she would be a total loss and could not fall into the hands of the enemy.

"These last actions took place well after daylight within 25 miles of the Dutch coast."

INQUEST ON SLIGO T.D.

A verdict in accordance with the medical evidence that, death was due to angina pectoris and cardiac failure, was returned at the inquest held by Dr. P. O'Hart, Coroner, Ballymote, on Mr. Frank Carty, T.D., Clooncurry, Ballinacarrow, Co. Sligo, who died suddenly on Thursday morning.

It was stated in evidence that Mr. Carty had gone to Ballymote on Wednesday afternoon, and, after his return, began moaning and vomiting after going to his bedroom. During the morning he told the maid he had got meat in Ballymote which nearly killed him, and said that he had left some of it in the kitchen. Later he complained of pains in his heart. About 10 a.m. he died.

Thomas McLoughlin, who had been employed as a casual labourer by Mr. Carty, said he had eaten none of the meat and it did him no harm.

LIMERICK BOYS DROWNED

While playing at Arthur's quay, Limerick, yesterday, two boys, Anthony Fogarty (6) and Francis Mulally (7), both residing at Arthur's quay, fell over the edge and were drowned. The alarm was raised by playmates, but in the meantime the bodies had been swept down by the tide. The body of Fogarty was recovered one hundred yards away, and artificial respiration was tried, but without result. The body of the second boy was recovered later by boatmen with grappling irons.

DRUMCONDRA WIN EASILY

Drumcondra readily accounted for Cork United by 4-0 in the semi-final of the City Cup at Shelbourne Park last night. Cork, who had a junior, Walsh, in goal in place of Foley, played below par; but, on the other hand, Drumcondra gave their brightest display this season. Cardiff brought off some good saves during Cork pressure in the second half. The fulls, O'Rourke and Byrne, tackled keenly, and kicked a good length; while the half-backs, O'Brien, Martin and O'Mara, were always up with their forwards, who played enterprising football.

Geoghegan opened the scoring, and McGlynn got the second with a fine header. McNamara got the third with another well-timed header, and in the second half Dyer, from a free, put Drumcondra further ahead.

FOUR MEN REMANDED

Four men, three of them employés of the Great Southern Railway Co., were remanded by Senior District Justice Hannon, in Dublin, on charges of conspiracy and the larceny of stores valued at £60. The men were:—Alexander J. Bowman (36), electrician, Bulfin road, Inchicore, Joseph Fox (35), labourer, Crampton Buildings, Dublin; John Rolands (34), machinist, Emmet road, Inchicore, and Thomas Hanrahan (42), fitter, Ring terrace, Inchicore.

Mr. D. O Donnchadha (State Solicitor's Office), prosecuting, said that some of the exhibits in the case had to be submitted to the Scientific Bureau of the Guards for tests.

The case was adjourned to October 2nd.

For house-breaking, Patrick Kelly (23), mechanic, Sherrard street, Dublin; was sentenced to six months' imprisonment by District Justice Lennon in Dublin yesterday. Other terms of imprisonment were:—For illegal possession of bicycle parts, three months, and two months for illegal possession of a bicycle. Bail was fixed pending an appeal.

'The Fuehrer's Speeches

Hitler's Speeches. Edited by Norman H. Baynes. Oxford University Press (for the Royal Institute of International Affairs). Two vols. 50/- net.

THESE volumes give a careful and comprehensive selection of passages from the speeches of the German leader, from 1922 to 1939, rendered into English by Mr. Norman Baynes. The passages are arranged in sections under subject-headings, and within the sections in chronological order; they are fully indexed for ease of reference.

Without a complete text of the speeches, it is impossible to say how far the editor has been unbiassed in his choice of passages; it is naturally difficult for a belligerent even of the most scholarly detachment to avoid showing a certain partiality; but the work gives the impression, at least, of being designed as genuine and accurate documentary evidence of the utterances of the Fuehrer, not as propaganda for any particular cause.

The first volume includes the great majority of the speeches of before 1935, as well as those of internal topics. They are arranged under such titles as Religion, Kultur, Economics, Bolshevism and the Jews. The section of speeches on the constitution is especially valuable in demonstrating the development of the constitutional position and ideals of the National Socialist Party.

Foreign Policy

The second volume is devoted entirely to foreign policy. Here, in addition to public speeches, there are included the published accounts of a few interviews and various diplomatic communications of relevance. Mr. Baynes has given in extenso a great part of the text of the most important speeches, such as the famous speech to the Reichstag on April 28th, 1939, dealing with President Roosevelt's peace appeal of April 14th in connection with the Danzig crisis. This oration, reported at a length of fifty pages, includes "the familiar retrospect, with its criticism of the Treaty of Versailles," The Berlin speech of 26th September, 1938—three days before the Munich Agreement—setting forth Hitler's view of the Czechoslovak crisis, appears to be given in full.

Mr. Baynes' work is of considerable importance to every student of international affairs, and is an indispensable complement to "Mein Kampf." The extensive bibliography and brief, but lucid, explanatory notes add greatly to its value.

Miscellaneous

The Irish Industrial Year Book, 1942. Dublin: McEvoy Publishing Co. 5/- net.

The ninth issue of this useful reference book contains a great deal of information about almost every phase of the country's industrial life. Plentiful statistics are given, which are illustrated by charts showing their relative importance. Agriculture is not neglected, and prices, wages, output, etc., are fully considered. There is a directory of Irish-made goods and an Irish Press directory.

The Journal of the Cork Historical and Archæological Society. Vol. XLVII., No. 165. January-June, 1942. Cork: Guy. 10/- net.

The communication upon "Debtors in Cork Gaols, 1705-1872," by Michael V. Conlon, M.A., LL.B., is the most interesting in this publication, which maintains the standard it has set over fifty years for accurate and valuable research in the history of various parts of Munster. Other features include statistics of deaths, births and marriages in the united parishes of Knockainy and Patrickswell Co. Limerick, for the years 1815-1941, the Rev. Lee, C.C., D.D., with a commentary by Domhnall Mac Cartaigh; the proceedings of the Society; reviews, and several articles.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

"Writing Up" the War

Covering All Fronts. By Ralph Ingersoll. London: The Bodley Head. 12/6 net.

A FIRST-HAND account of the war and conditions on all war fronts by the only journalist who has visited every sector, Mr. Ralph Ingersoll, editor of America's famous newspaper, PM, describes his fourteen-week trip round the world, during which he travelled over 30,000 miles, and visited all the far-flung battle fronts in the Pacific, China, Russia, North Africa, the Mediterranean and Great Britain. In Russia he made an intensive study of all phases of Soviet life in wartime, and had a personal interview with Stalin.

Many aspects of the war are reviewed from experience gained by the author on the spot and interviews which he had with officials of the Allied Governments and fighting forces. The failures as well as the achievements of Britain and the U.S.A. are discussed with a frankness that will appeal to the reader. For instance, on his visit to Pearl Harbour, in the middle of July of last year, Mr. Ingersoll remarked that there did not seem to be many airports around, but everyone he talked with on the subject stressed the fact that Japanese bases were too far away to make heavy air attack possible.

Again—"It was not the lack of high-altitude fighters that cost the British Crete. It was the lack of any fighters at all. In a way we were as responsible as the British for the fall of Crete. If we had been able to get Tomahawks to them in time our side would still be in possession of the island."

Some Recent Fiction

Our Geraldine. By Guy Fletcher. London: Cassell. 8/6 net.

HERE is a novel which will afford frank enjoyment to the most blasé reader. Plot there is almost none, but there are fun, amusing situations, and a healthy philosophy of life. While on a pleasure trip to Paris, Elizabeth Vian meets Tony Madison. They are both well off, young and attractive, but Elizabeth refuses to consider his proposals that they shall meet again. On arrival home, Elizabeth finds that her father is ruined, and that she has to begin life on her own. She obtains a situation as lady's maid to an immensely rich woman, to whom her taste in dress and skill in adapting clothes prove a heaven-sent boon. Unfortunately, Tony Madison is almost engaged to this millionairess. The solution of the problem, in which the rich woman appears almost as fairy godmother, is the matter of this pleasant novel.

Meet Madame Mazova. By Dorothy S. Hunt. London: Hurst and Blackett. 9/- net.

THE heroine in this book, or, rather, chief character, is a woman of mixed blood and no morals, ruled by the caprice of the moment; a creature of the unhealthy mind, and, fortunately, a quite unlikely person to encounter beyond the range of sensational novels. Her existence is divided between her Paris house and an English home, which she has converted into a house of ill-fame, with herself as "the cook and the captain bold." The story turns upon the supposed relationship of Madame Mazova and one Barratt Nicholas Fordham, with whom Nan Pennington, young English secretary of Mme. Mazova, is in love. The book is full of a sort of crude and riotous life, laid on more with a large palette knife than by deft brushwork.

Penelope Seton. By Ruth Fleming. London: Hutchinson. 8/6 net.

WHEN Penelope Seton is engaged to look after the three evacuee children in Sir Geoffrey Grant's household, she promptly falls in love with his nephew, Stephen. The baronet has other plans for Stephen's future, closely connected with one Julia, but in the end he is prevailed upon to consent to the marriage of the two lovers. The theme is not an unusual one, in spite of its wartime setting, but the book is very readable.

THE BAITING OF THE DEER

STILL unassuaged by smoking fumes of war,
The ancient gods for blood and terror call;
Nor fail to find, beneath a peaceful star
A green space for their savage ritual.

And we, star-trusted guardians of the deer,
Now watch our peaceful treasure, set upon,
Tortured and baited, wild with pain and fear,
To glorify the gods of Babylon.

Like stones we stand: a human brotherhood
Watching our hunters sacrifice unmoved
To cruel pagan deities' of blood,
The gentle brothers that Saint Francis loved.

Michael Scot.

Dublin's Fair Citie

A Guide to Dublin. Published by the Irish Tourist Association. 6d. net.

"THE seat of this citie is of all sides pleasant, comfortable and wholesome. If you would traverse hills, they are not far off. If champaign ground, it lieth of all parts. If you be delited with fresh water, the famous river called the Liffie runneth fast by. If you will take the view of the sea, it is at hand."

This concise prospectus, written many years ago by a gentleman called Stanihurst—and which, apart from the little matter of the fragrance of the Liffey, could hold good for the same citie to-day—forms the introduction to the newest edition of the Irish Tourist Association Official Guide to Dublin. This compact volume, which will be retailed at the modest price of sixpence, henceforward will hold a permanent place on my book-shelf, and deserves a position of prominence on the book-shelf of every Dubliner.

Guide books should form part of every school curriculum, guide books that is, of the pupil's own city, for the very unfamiliarity of strange cities will prevent him from taking either their architectural delights or their archæological oddities too much for granted.

On the whole, the plain people of Dublin are as ignorant of its history as they are blind to its beauty, and, since the battle of Clontarf, the only epithet which has remained in the minds of its fickle inhabitants is "dirty." Dublin will continue to be known as "dear, dirty Dublin" long after it has ceased to be either.

But to return to the book. From time immemorial it has been an accepted tradition among publishers that, where guide books are illustrated, they should be illustrated with photographs exposed by some pioneer photographer in far-off, happy days, when women's skirts came within a very few inches of the ground; when motor cars closely resembled that variety of mechanical clothes-horse known as a "reaper-and-binder," when ... y caparisoned military men disported themselves in the wide, open spaces, in front of the Bank of Ireland, and when penny-farthing bicycles were all the rage. The Irish Tourist Association has put paid to this poor tradition.

Here we have a selection of admirable pictures in the modern idiom, taken certainly within the last ten years, and probably within the last

THE LATE LORD HOLMPATRICK

The Committee of the Irish Society for Protection of Birds unanimously passed, at its meeting yesterday, a vote of profound regret at the death of the Society's President, the late Lord Holmpatrick, D.S.O., and expressive of its deep sympathy with Lady Holmpatrick and her family in their bereavement.

The Governors of Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital, at their meeting on Wednesday last, passed the following resolution in silence, all members standing;

"The Governors of Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital have learned with profound sorrow of the death of their colleague, the Right Hon. Lord HolmPatrick, and desire to convey to Lady HolmPatrick and to the other members of his family their most sincere sympathy. Lord HolmPatrick had been a member of the Board for more than twelve years, and during that time had given his services unsparingly to the hospital. His wide experience, sound judgment and wise advice were invaluable. The Governors feel that the hospital has sustained an inestimable loss."

Stalingrad

After about eight weeks of furious fighting Stalingrad continues to hold out against the ever-increasing violence of the German attack; but yesterday's reports indicate that the pressure on the Russian defenders has become almost irresistible. The defence of Stalingrad already has become one of the most notable feats of the war. Stalingrad has been described by a Russian newspaper as "the Red Verdun," and there can be no doubt that even the siege of Leningrad has not provided a more notable example of human courage and endurance. The history of warfare affords no parallel to the ferocity with which Marshal von Bock has been attacking Stalingrad. For the German commander it has been—and still is—a race against time. Already the autumn rains are beginning to turn the sandy soil around Stalingrad into a quagmire. Marshal von Bock has bitter recollections of last year, when the German offensive against Moscow was frustrated by the sudden onset of winter; and he is determined, if at all possible, not only to capture Stalingrad before the end of the present month, but to establish the German forces on the line of the Volga before the advent of Russian frosts makes further campaigning impossible. His latest thrust against Stalingrad is being conducted with terrific strength. Masses of German and Italian reinforcements have been flung into the fight in an exceedingly narrow front. At least one thousand aeroplanes and hundreds of tanks have been used to constitute what is described as "a shattering concentration of metal," and the defenders are being given no respite by night or by day. According to reports from Moscow, Marshal von Bock is driving his tanks furiously against Stalingrad's sturdy defences. During the last forty-eight hours the Russians have been forced to abandon five strong points along the perimeter of the city's fortifications, while the Germans claim to have reached the Volga in the south-west. The Red Star admits that the general situation in the Stalingrad sector is "exceedingly tense," and it is becoming more and more obvious that Marshal von Bock is determined at all costs—and the cost is extremely high—to reduce Stalingrad within the minimum space of time. As we write, the city's fate is resting on a knife's edge. Even Russian heroism is not proof against such a concentration of mechanised force as Marshal von Bock has been able to hurl against Stalingrad, and it is quite possible that by the time when these lines appear in print the Germans may be establishing themselves on the banks of the Volga.

The fall of Stalingrad would be a severe blow to the Russians. It also would be a set-back for the Allied nations' cause, because Stalingrad has become a symbol of Russian resistance, just as Leningrad and Moscow were symbols last year. If Marshal von Bock can capture Stalingrad and take up his position on the banks of the Volga, he will have achieved an important success; but there is no reason to suppose either that he will be able to avoid another winter campaign, or that he will succeed in his major object, which is to destroy the Russian armies. On the contrary, it is now almost certain that the Germans will be forced to spend another winter under Russian conditions. It would be idle to pretend that the Russian forces will not be embarrassed by the cutting of their lateral communications; but there is no evidence of the slightest decline in Russian moral, and, if Marshal Timoshenko can keep his armies more or less intact, even if eventually he should be compelled to retire to the shelter of the Urals, he will have fulfilled the principal purpose of Allied strategy. This is a "total" war. Its strategy is indivisible. The Russians have been making enormous sacrifices; but their present rôle is not so much to defeat the Germans, as to keep them occupied while the British and Americans are mobilising their resources of man-power and material for the ultimate trial of strength between totalitarianism and democracy. It is only natural that the Russians should be impatient of what seems to be Anglo-American inaction. During the last fifteen months they have been doing most of the fighting, and their sacrifices have been appalling; but, if they can hold the Germans for another few weeks, they will have made an inestimable contribution to the Allied cause. The real danger, from the Allied point of view, was that the Germans might have been able to crush the Soviet armies, and force Russia to conclude a separate peace before the beginning of the winter. If that had happened, Herr Hitler's hands would have been freed for a gigantic offensive against the British next spring, or even for a sudden thrust into the Middle East during the winter months. As a result of Marshal Timoshenko's remarkable series of rear-guard actions, however, that danger has been averted. Even if Stalingrad should fall to-day, the Soviet armies remain in being. Their losses have been great, but probably not any greater than those of their opponents. They have been driven back by the inexorable pressure of Germany's mechanised might; but they still constitute a formidable fighting force, which will have an important part to play in the fateful events of next spring.

The Hat Shortage

The shortage of hats, and the raw materials necessary for the manufacture of hats, is attaining serious proportions in Great Britain, and the general consensus of opinion seems to be that the majority of healthy Englishmen in future will be forced to go about their daily tasks bare-headed. The younger men and women will not, of course, have any cause for worry; the Government already has supplied most of them with a nice line in "battle-bowlers" and forage-caps, and those who have not yet received any official issue of such headgear always can solve the problem by enlisting in one of the many voluntary services. For older people, and older men in particular, the solution is not so simple. They cannot join the forces, and they cannot very well go bare-headed. The prospect, for instance, of London's elderly bankers, insurance agents and stockbrokers stalking along the Strand, their scanty hair ruffled in the early morning breeze, is not a pleasant one. Figures, well known in the political world, would not achieve half their accustomed effect if they were forced to appear in public without their famed head-pieces. Mr. Churchill without his hat is as unthinkable as Mr. Churchill without his cigar, and the idea that Mr. Anthony Eden, who set a fashion in hats for the whole world, should be unable to replace his current "Anthony Eden," due to the shortage of felt, is ludicrous. About a year ago it was announced that top-hats shortly would disappear; that announcement was a grave threat to British dignity, but the people of England bore it with equanimity, and now, just as they are adjusting themselves to a new state of affairs, in which top-hats number among the unforgotten relics of the past, comes the graver news that hats of all kinds may disappear from the wardrobes and hat-racks of the nation. If the shortage of materials necessitates a severe cut in the production of hats, we would venture to suggest that the milliners should start to economise on women's hats. The frills and flounces which the modern young woman is wont to wear upon her head form no useful protection against the elements, and, from a utilitarian point of view, can be discounted. Women nowadays wear hats for reasons either of beauty or propriety; endurance does not enter into it, and the hats quite effectively could be made of waste paper or pasteboard, suitably garnished.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, CRUMLIN
ARCHITECTS' VISIT

Members of the Architectural Association of Ireland were conducted through the new Church of St. Mary, Crumlin, Dublin, yesterday by the Rector, the Rev. Walter Burrows, and had an opportunity to examine its architectural features.

The plan of the new church largely is traditional, except that the nave has a somewhat greater span than is usual. The chancel is a little longer than usual, and the sanctuary has greater depth. A small chapel in the form of a south transept, for the use of children, is an unusual feature.

Clergy and choir vestries adjoin the north porch, and are entered both from there and from the chancel, the principal entrances being on the north side and the west-end. The organ, which originally was in St. Peter's Church, Athlone, and which was rebuilt in its present position after having been presented to the new church, is placed over the Children's Chapel.

The building gives a sense of simplicity and modernity, and at the same time a feeling of traditional parish church architecture. Local bricks have been used, with artificial stone dressings to the windows and other parts, and the base is built in Wicklow granite. The floor of the nave is of compressed cork. Cork is also partly used in the chancel, the remainder being in Portland stone, including the steps. The Communion table rests on a piece of polished black Kilkenny marble.

The joinery work is all in pine, specially chemically treated and wax polished. The carvings around the pulpit depict the progress of the church building, while the lectern and font are those which were in the old church.

WEDDINGS

Bourke—Perrott. — The wedding took place on Wednesday last, at Douglas Church, Co. Cork, of Mr. Francis Charles Bourke, son of the late Mr. Norman Bourke, and of Mrs. Bourke, Reen-a-Foil, Kilworth, Co. Cork, and Miss Eileen Humphreys Perrott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Perrott, Ballincurrig Lodge, Douglas, Co. Cork. The Rev. W. Grainger officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by a matron of honour, her sister, Mrs. James Whitaker. Mr. Beamish was best man, and Mr. J. Whitaker, brother-in-law of the bride, was usher in the church. After a reception held at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. Bourke left for their honeymoon.

Quirke—Finlay. — The marriage took place on Wednesday, at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, Marino, of Mr. Hugh E. Quirke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quirke, 62 Cadogan road, Fairview, and Miss Kathleen Frances Finlay, daughter of the late Mr. H. M. Finlay and of Mrs. Finlay-Casey, 5 Malahide road, Clontarf. The ceremony, with Nuptial Mass and Papal Blessing, was performed by the Rev. W. Fitzpatrick, D.D., Mr. Joseph Quirke was best man, and the bridesmaids were the Misses Lily Davenport and Teresa Quirke. A reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride's mother.
